ARIZONA WEEKLY ENTERPRISE.

FLORENCE, - OCTOBER 29, 1887

A Golden Opportunity.

Silver Belt.
If ever there was an auspicious time to embark in the cattle business in Arizona, it would seem to the observant as if it were now. The well worn advice to the intending speculator in stocks and wheat, to buy in times of great depression, is equally sound in the purchase of range cattle. And certainly no reasonable being can expect to see prices for stock cattle lower than the ruling figures at the present time. The great losses sustained by the stockmen of the North-west in consequence of the severity of last winter, and the destructive drought that prevailed during the first half of 1887 throughout parts of Colorado, Kansas, Western Texas, and New Mexico and Arizona, resulted in the almost complete demoralization of the range cattle business.

And while recovery from these disasters is necessarily slow yet it will be none the less certain, when the wrecks of the unfortunates who were caught in the maelstrom and succumbed to its ruthless force, have been cleared away. The staunch old ship, freed from the debris which has impeded its progress, will then be righted, its sails will belly with the trade wind of prosperity and she will again sail grandly on. Stay with the ship boys—those of you who are wavering—and to others whose treasures are committed to less seaworthy crafts in Eastern waters, we advise you to transfer them to our Western Argosy, and enjoy our coming prosperity. There is no better business opportunity anywhere in the country to-day, and no more desirable place to embark than Arizona. We can truthfully say, we have a sea of grass.

Renegade Apaches.

Don Carlos Velasco states that beyond a doubt a small band of Chiricahua Apaches are roaming, robbing, and murdering at will, first in the State of Sonora and again in the state of Chihuahua. On the night following the surrender of Geronimo to General Miles three Apache men, one boy and three women escaped and were never again captured. The leader of the renegade band is Jose Maria Elias, a well known character, both in Arizona and Sonora. When a boy he was taken prisoner by a party of Mexicans, among whom was Don Jose Maria Elias, now resident on the San Pedro. He adopted the boy and gave him his name. The young Apache, after a residence of five or six years, escaped to his tribe, and thence followed deeds of blood which made his name a terror to the country. During the recent sitting of the United States Grand Jury in this city, Mr. Velasco states that he questioned one of the San Carlos interpreters as to the whereabouts of the renegade in question, and was told that he was not on the reservation, but that he escaped as above described on the surrender of Geronimo.—Citizen.

The grand jury of Tucson is to be congratulated in presenting an indictment against Geronimo for murder, and it is to be hoped that the authorities there will be backed up by Governor Zuleik in their attempt to secure his return to this territory for trial. The governor promised at the outset of his administration, to see that those murderous outlaws were brought to justice through the civil courts, and we do not believe that he has changed his opinion. The policy of the war department to treat a band of murderous brigands as prisoners of war is a false and ridiculous one. There would be just as much sense in treating train robbers, if captured, as such. Should a band of Mexican bandits, who ply their vocation in Mexico, cross the line to Arizona and murder, pillage, rob and kill defenseless women and helpless children, ambush unsuspecting men, and should they be captured and identified, does any one suppose that they would be treated as prisoners of war or claim that they should? And there would be just as much common sense and reason in such a proposition as in treating Geronimo and his gang with that distinction. So far as known this wily murderer never fought the soldiers of the United States army but did his fiendish dastardly work on unprotected and unsuspecting citizens, and he should be returned to the territory, be granted a fair trial for his crimes. If he or his attorneys should claim that it was impossible to obtain a fair trial in southern Arizona, where there is a strong prejudice against him let them get a change of venue to Yavapai county. We would give him the benefit of every doubt he might claim here, and hang him impartially or without prejudice and by a large majority.—Journal-Miner.

Commissioner Coleman, in a recent interview, expressed himself as follows, on the subject of sorghum sugar: "I see no reason why our people should not generally make sugar south of the thirty-ninth parallel of latitude or below the early frost line. There is no crop more easily grown than sorghum. It produces from twelve to fifteen tons of cane, which would be more than twice to fifteen hundred pounds of sugar to the acre. There is an over-production of most other farm products, and hardly pay the cost of raising them. Here is a new field opened for a portion of our farming population. Our country is paying other nations over $100,000,000 annually, and besides this a tariff of $50,000 a year. This is impoverishing our country, and if that vast sum can be retained at home and be distributed among our own people it will be a great blessing to them. I see no reason why sugar factories should not be found as common as flouring mills, all over our country south of this to the Gulf of Mexico."—Arizona.

A case of judicial outrage I do not believe could have happened in any town in the United States, occurred at Ilkington, England. The criminal in the case was a 6-year old baby boy. He was accused of having stolen a watch. The mother said he found the watch. The mother restored it promptly to the owner. The baby might have been given the benefit of the doubt, at least. The owner—a good, virtuous, Pharisean—complained. The police executed the warrant in the middle of the night. The little lad was dragged out of bed between 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning. Think of that! He was locked up until the next morning. Then the magistrate ordered that he should be birched. This was done with such cruelty that the little man's body was cut open in six places, reaching around his back on to his stomach. Think of the devilish cruelty of this punishment and of such a little fellow!—London Letters to New York World.
